"Coding" promotes student collaboration, creative thinking, problem solving and control to tell their own story about their learning. Students continuously scaffold their new understanding of information based on the curriculum and experiences engaged in the learning environment by applying ideas via storytelling or game using a block coding application known as Scratch. Students plan, sequence idea, test their code, debug and rethink their path until it is time to showcase their final product. By integrating opportunities for coding students are able to share their knowledge with peers, teachers and parents through discovery and/or play.
