

African Diaspora Youth Conference

Going online for 2021

The African Diaspora Youth Conference is excited to announce its return this year with an all-new online platform on Friday, May 7th, 2021. Unlike previous conferences, this year ADYC will be held on one day; from 9:00 am to 3:00 pm. Students will have the opportunity to experience 'Diaspora' virtually with our various keynote speakers, facilitation workshops, student mentors, and many more.

The theme this year is The Power of You, which focuses on showing students that no matter what obstacles they may face, they can overcome any adversity.

We are also excited to announce our two keynote speakers this year. First is ex-homicide detective Khary Mason from Detroit, who uses spoken word to explore assorted topics such as racism, family, education, and many more. Our second keynote, Jeff A.D Martin, is a motivational speaker, author, podcaster, mentor, and social activist from Toronto.

Students who attend the conference will receive a $1000 scholarship, which can be applied to any First Year program of study at the University of Windsor.

For more information about the African Diaspora Youth Conference, schedules, keynotes and many more, please visit www.uwindsor.ca/diasporayouthconference/

University of Windsor